NOTIFICATION

Dated Kohima, the 30th October, 2026.

FOR/GEN-31/15/2023/863: In pursuant of the Hon'ble Cabinet decision conveyed vide their No.CAB-1/14/2023 dated 15th June, 2026, the Governor of Nagaland is pleased to notify the implementation of Nagaland Agarwood (Conservation and Promotion) Policy, 2026, which aims at assisting the farmers for cultivation and trade of Agarwood.

1. Preamble

i. Nagaland is known for its rich biodiversity, endemism and strong tradition of community-based conservation of natural resources. Forests and wildlife form an integral part of Naga identity, customs and traditional practices. Sustainable management of these natural resources safeguards the heritage while ensuring that traditional ecological knowledge is preserved and passed to future generations.

ii. With over 70 per cent of population residing in rural areas, Nagaland is predominantly an agrarian state and the economy is dependent on development of agriculture and allied sectors. The traditional form of cultivation i.e. Jhum or shifting cultivation is the method that is widely practiced across the state, with over 75 per cent of farmers involved, catering to approximately 60 percent of food demand in the State. In recent years, Jhum has come under stress owing to a number of factors such as impact of climate change, increased pressure on land altered land use patterns and growing disengagement of youth, who are moving to alternate livelihood opportunities. This has resulted in reduction of Jhum cycle in the State from 12-14 years to 8-10 years, accompanied by a switch to cultivation of commercial cash crops, leading to degradation of ecosystem and loss of nutrients from the soil. Hence, Jhum is practiced in the State, though not ecologically sustainable and economically viable. Further, with an estimated loss of over 264 sq. km. of forests during last 4 years, Nagaland is ranked among the top five States in the Country with largest decrease of forest cover (India State of Forest Report (ISFR), 2023).

iii. In anticipation of instant economic returns, farmers in the State are shifting to commercial agriculture/agroforestry with crops ranging from fruits, vegetables, pulses to commercial tree species. The State Government too is encouraging the farmers to adopt to climate resilient and remunerative cropping systems. It is expected that this shift in the cropping pattern in the State will also bring in a lot of private investments and provide additional income to the farmers. Factors like uncertainty of the demand, underdeveloped supply chains, shortage of skilled labour and processing technology and limited market connections are hindering our farmers from adopting to these cropping systems. Though farmers in Nagaland are getting better returns with adoption of commercial crops such as rubber, coffee, tea, cardamom, etc. agroforestry models involving evergreen tree crop could provide better option which will be economically more viable and ecologically sustainable.

iv. In recent years, Nagaland has seen demographic shifts marked by evolving migration patterns that reflect broader socio-economic transformations in the Society. This trend is driven largely by intra-state and intra-district movements and a steady rise in rural-to-urban migration, particularly towards district headquarters like Kohima and Dimapur. The migration primarily driven by factors like Unemployment, lack of remunerative livelihood options, etc. has put undue pressure on limited urban resources/infrastructure available in Nagaland resulting issues like water scarcity, traffic congestion, increased level of pollution, law and order, etc. An appropriate policy for economically viable agro-forestry system involving evergreen tree species viz. Agarwood can be a strategy for better economic returns, quality employment and boost to the forest based industries in the State.

v. Agarwood (Aquilaria malaccensis Lam.), often referred to as the "wood of the gods" (Persoon G. A. and van Beek H. H., 2008)is highly valued for its medicinal, incense and perfumery properties. It is a fragrant resinous wood that holds immense cultural, economic and ecological significance globally. Agar is traded in various forms such as raw wood, chips or oil. Due to illegal harvest and trade, Agarwood is listed as critically endangered species in the wild by the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES) and thus the trade in Agarwood and its products is strictly regulated.

vi. Nagaland with favorable geo-climatic conditions is suitable for cultivation of quality Agarwood. Natural distribution of Agarwood is observed in foothills and relatively warm places with high concentration in areas like Tzurang valley, Japfukong, Tuli, Sitap, Tamlu, Oting, Upper Tiru, Lower Tiru, Tizit, Athibung, Beisumpui, etc. These areas are also known for superior quality agarwood with natural infection. However, unscientific extraction and habitat loss due to Jhum cultivation have led to reduction in natural stands of Agarwood in the State.

vii. Farmers have taken up large scale plantations of Agarwood in various suitable locations across the State to harness its economic potential. Further, Agarwood cultivation in the State is on the rise due to its increasing demand and remuneration potential. In addition to the sizable economic returns, Agarwood cultivation provides alternative livelihood and ecological services, also assisting in reducing pressure on natural forests. The short rotation evergreen tree species (with 10-15 years) is suitable for Jhum area and augurs well for organic farming systems that the farmers must adopt.

viii. With an estimated market value of over Rs.21,664 Crores ($2.4 billions)in India and ability to generate much more revenue in terms of employment and livelihood, there is huge economic potential for trade of Agarwood. With renewed interest in cultivation, recent increase in CITES export quota and government initiatives to legalize & regulate the industry to combat illegal trade and formalize the market, North Eastern states are key to realising this potential. To tap the economic potential unravelling in the region through scientific cultivation and trade, there is an urgent need for comprehensive policy for the conservation and promotion of Agarwood in Nagaland. With other States viz. Assam, Karnataka, Kerala, Tripura, etc. making rapid strides, we are likely to fall behind for want of a comprehensive policy for promotion of cultivation, harvest, processing and trade.

2. Objectives of the Policy

The Nagaland Agarwood (Conservation and Promotion) Policy, 2026 is conceptualized and drafted with the following broad objectives;

i. To conserve and augment Agarwood resources in the State by evolving suitable agro-forestry model for providing better livelihood opportunities for the farmers.

ii. To conduct comprehensive resource mapping to ascertain status of Agarwood in the State and to prescribe robust conservation measures to protect and sustain agarwood population in their natural habitat.

iii. To create awareness and build capability within the farming community for scientific cultivation, harvesting, post-harvest processing and marketing of Agarwood and its products with customised training programmes for various stakeholders.

iv. To encourage the cultivation of Agarwood in the State, facilitate registration of agarwood trees/plantations to maintain a comprehensive database & ensure legal compliance and to facilitate scientific harvesting, processing/value addition& trade to enhance economic viability of agarwood cultivation in the State.

v. To facilitate testing & certification to provide quality assurance for the Agarwood and its products generated in the State, to establish & strengthen national and international market linkages and to prescribe appropriate royalty schedule by the State to ensure the best possible returns for local agarwood growers & traders and reasonable revenue for the State.

vi. To suggest necessary amendments to existing felling and transit rules to ensure compliance and compatibility with acts, rules and guidelines in neighbouring states, national and international level.

vii. To integrate agarwood conservation and promotion efforts with existing schemes and initiatives of the Department of Environment, Forests and Climate Change to ensure synergy and effective resource utilization.

viii. To seek convergence and cooperation with various government and non-government agencies working in the field of forestry, biodiversity conservation and trade. Further, to establish collaborative partnerships with the institutes of national and international reputation and with the neighbouring States of Assam, Tripura, etc. to share knowledge and expertise in agarwood cultivation, harvesting, transit, value addition, and marketing.

3. Strategy for Conservation and Promotion of Agarwood in Nagaland

i. Agarwood Resource Mapping: Studies to estimate availability of Agarwood in the natural forests and plantations and its quality shall be undertaken by the Department of Environment, Forests and Climate Change in association with reputed institutions viz. Rain Forest Research Institute (RFRI), Jorhat; Botanical Survey of India; Nagaland University, etc. Further, areas suitable for scientific cultivation of Agarwood shall be identified based on the geo-climatic features and the requirements of Agarwood. Resource availability in terms of suitable land, quality planting material, technical knowledge, processing facilities, market accessibility, working capital, etc. shall be assessed. The Department shall make detailed plans for resource augmentation, where ever necessary. The findings shall be published by the Department and put to use for formulating Agarwood Conservation and Promotion activities in the State.

ii. Conservation and promotion of Agarwood in Nagaland: Conservation and promotion of Agarwood in the State shall be aimed through protection of forests with abundance of Agarwood, development of nurseries for supply of quality planting material, plantation of Agarwood saplings in degraded forest areas and promotion of cultivation of Agarwood in community/individual lands. Clear strategy for conservation and protection of Agarwood in nature and facilitation of the same in area outside forests shall be prepared by the Department and adopted by all stakeholders to achieve the stated objectives. Proper awareness amongst all stakeholders shall be created for scientific cultivation, protection, harvest and post-harvest processing of Agarwood. Further, processing and trade of Agarwood and its products shall be promoted through establishment of processing units and market linkages. Necessary trainings, awareness creation and capacity building programmes shall be designed and taken up by the Department.

iii. Resource augmentation for conservation and promotion of Agarwood: Established strategies for Conservation and promotion of Agarwood in the Country, especially in neighbouring States of North Eastern India shall be analysed and suitable ones shall be adopted. Technological innovations in terms of cultivation (management of plantations), post-harvest processing and marketing shall be studied and customised for adoption in the State. The Department of Environment, Forests and Climate Change shall formulate appropriate schemes for conservation and promotion of Agarwood in Nagaland based on the resource inventory. Necessary, funds shall be sourced from the budgetary provisions under various schemes of the State Government and Government of India. Further, the Department shall leverage technical and financial resources from various Government and Non-Government Organizations.

4. Interventions for Conservation and Promotion of Agarwood in Nagaland

i. Production and supply of Quality Planting Material: The Department shall assess the requirement and make available quality seedlings of Agarwood to the needy farmers. Necessary technological interventions (viz. identification of suitable strains of Aquilaria malaccensis and its mass multiplication) shall be made in association with elite institutions. Regional nurseries shall be established for the purpose. If necessary, quality planting materials of suitable Agarwood strains shall be sourced from certified agencies and made available to the farmers during the initial years.

ii. Creation and Maintenance of Agarwood Plantations: The Department of Environment, Forests and Climate Change shall identify areas suitable for cultivation of Agarwood and create awareness regarding appropriate techniques for raising quality plantations. The Department shall endeavour to create around 500 ha of Agarwood plantations annually for the next ten years. Wherever the natural infection is not to the expected levels, the artificial inoculation of the trees shall be facilitated. Appropriate schemes shall be formulated for creating and maintaining quality Agarwood plantations on the available degraded forest lands and community/individual lands.

iii. Facilitation for registration of Agarwood plantations, its harvest, processing and marketing: The Department shall frame appropriate Rules/Guidelines for registration of the Agarwood plantations, harvesting and processing and transit of the of the Agarwood and its products. Processing of Agarwood (marketable products like Agarwood Chips and Oil) shall also be promoted by facilitating linkages with various institutions for providing necessary technological and financial interventions. Necessary market linkages may also be facilitated by involving various government and non-government agencies.

iv. Training and Capacity Building: Appropriate programmes shall be designed for creating awareness and enhancing technical competence of various stakeholders for creation of quality Agarwood products/resources in the State, with special emphasis on the farmers willing to cultivate Agarwood in their private land. Appropriate training shall also be provided to farmers, extension workers and department personnel for artificial inoculation of agarwood trees and post-harvest processing. Further, institutional capability shall be developed for establishing linkages for leveraging appropriate technology, market and finances for agarwood produced in the State.

v. Coordination with various agencies: The Department of Environment, Forests and Climate Change shall coordinate various departments/agencies at State/National/International level for effective conservation of Agarwood resources and promotion of its cultivation and trade for benefit of local farmers. Best practices and technology available for scientific cultivation, harvesting, processing and marketing of Agarwood in the region/country shall be studied and adopted in the State.

5. Summary and Outcome:

i. Agarwood (Aquilaria malaccensis Lam.) is critically endangered tree species available in Nagaland and other North Eastern states having immense ecological and economic potential. The Nagaland Agarwood (Conservation and Promotion) Policy, 2026 advocates appropriate interventions for assessment of Agarwood resources in the State and meticulous strategies to conserve the same. The policy document recommends promotion of scientific cultivation and trade of Agarwood in the State to harness potential benefits for ecological stability and betterment of farming community. The Department of Environment, Forests and Climate Change in coordination with other agencies/stakeholders shall prepare and implement necessary schemes/interventions, and coordinate with various institutions/organisations to achieve the objectives of this policy document.

ii. Conservation and protection of Agarwood stands in its natural habitats will assist in rejuvenating the population of the critically endangered tree species in the State and lead to ecological sustainability. Promoting its cultivation on degraded lands owned by the community/individuals will assist in boosting the rural economy, result in employment generation and provide quality livelihood to the rural mass.
